

The Golden Rule

The Golden Rule is a vital emphasis on empathy and the reciprocity of morality, referring to the words of Jesus in Matthew 7:12 and Luke 6:31.

Even though the Golden Rule addresses human interpersonal relationships, its message is additionally theological. That is, the very character of God guides how we should interact and relate to one another.

The importance of following the Golden Rule is that we are to follow and exercise the Golden Rule because God's heavenly wisdom teaches self-control, and his virtue teaches kindness.

In summary, the Golden Rule encompasses the empathic essence of morality. It is a simple yet powerful way of saying that we should recognize the respective dignity of our fellow man and not forget we all are capable of inflicting immoral actions. This is vital in following the commandments of God and creating a more virtuous world.
